

It is not so easy nowadays to develop an e-learning site that could integrate rather than substitute what is commonly made in class. The danger is to create something too professional that requires economic and intellectual effort and remains separate from everyday teaching. Another danger may be the creation of a container that could simplify and devalue what happens in the complex process of teaching and learning.

The project Learning with MYMOOD wants to have a 'light start', something not too professional to collect the different hints in the field of e-learning (or better blended learning) and lay the foundation of what may be later developed. It is just from a teacher's point of view and open to whatever may seem interesting and new: from videos to cartoons, to the production of educational posters, to the exploration of more professional sites, to research in the field of Teacher Professional Development.

For support and suggestions write to mymood@altervista.org